The Enterprise Business Intelligence Data Warehouse Architect is responsible for developing and maintaining the institutional data warehouse architecture required to support the overall enterprise and business unit requirements. This includes defining the physical table structures; including any modifications required to support business reporting requirements; the enterprise data model; and the data dictionary used to support standard and ad hoc BI reporting. The BI DW Architect is also responsible for developing and maintaining the business model and presentation layer components of the BI a